SAINT-DENIS

THE ROYAL ABBEY

In the shadows of the Saint-Denis Cathedral Basilica, dive into the fascinating history of the royal abbey. Once one of the most influential monasteries of the Middle Ages, its convent buildings – magnificently reconstructed in the 18th century by Robert de Cotte, architect to the king – are articulated around a supremely elegant cloister. This key site in France's history has been home to a boarding house founded by Napoleon since 1805, intended for orphans of soldiers having received the Legion of Honour. Still today, the school welcomes 500 young girls from families decorated with the Legion of Honour, the Military Medal or the National Order of Merit. Come explore this unique place where history and architecture come together to offer you a captivating journey through the centuries.

The Plaine Saint-Denis, once a major industrial hub, has long been marked by the deindustrialisation of the 1950s.

The region, fragmented by transport infrastructure linking the entire country, has now been transformed under the impulse of the 2024 Paris Games.

This redevelopment is aligned with the concept of 'compatible fragments' defined in the 1990s. During this walk between the Pleyel neighbourhood and the Stade de France, you'll discover how industrial or transport zones have been connected to create a new place of life in the Plaine Saint-Denis.

PLEYEL URBAN CROSSING

The Stade de France neighbourhood, already transformed following the 1998 World Cup, has seen a new evolution with the 2024 Paris Games. To the west, the Pleyel neighbourhood long marked by a rusting tower is reinventing itself.

This great urban project, which will continue after 2024, has seen the inauguration of the futuristic train station designed by Kengo Kuma and the spectacular Pleyel urban bridge, offering exceptional views over Greater Paris.

Dive into the heart of this transformation, from the traces of its industrial past to the Athletes' Village!

L'ÎLE-SAINT-DENIS AND ITS OLYMPIC TRANSFORMATIONS

The 2024 Paris Games have offered new momentum to L'île-Saint-Denis, an area left on the sidelines for many years. In 840, the destruction of its only bridge to stop the Vikings slowed its development for over a millennium. In 1844, a first bridge was constructed to finally link it to its neighbours, and 180 years later, a fourth bridge and new riverside eco-neighbourhood have been brought to life thanks to the Olympic Games. Accompanied by one of our guides, you'll make your way up the great arm of the Seine and cross the eco-neighbourhood which welcomed nearly 14,500 athletes in 2024. A fantastic chance to discuss the multiple urban and environmental challenges these Games represented for Seine-Saint-Denis!

THE ATHLETES' VILLAGE

Reaching across the towns of Saint-Denis, Saint-Ouen and Île-Saint-Denis, discover this innovative neighbourhood – exceptional heritage left behind by the 2024 Paris Games, housing nearly 14,500 athletes. Explore how it has been progressively transformed into an exemplary model of the city of tomorrow.

SAINT-DENIS PLEYEL TRAIN STATION

The Saint-Denis Pleyel train station embodies an innovative architecture, inspired by origami.

Bright and luminous despite its nine floors, it connects neighbourhoods, the Stade de France and the Athletes' Village via an open and fluid forecourt. A remarkable place and a symbol of the Grand Paris Express.
